The Total Reaction Screen is the latest yet simple technology for the development of eye hand coordination, response and reaction time, tracking, balance, proprioception, anticipation and peripheral vision.

TRS is a frame incorporating specially designed strips that give the appearance of a solid screen but allows objects such as: cricket balls and footballs to pass through it.

The TRS is specifically designed with a number of unique and world patented technologies. These features allow the screens to individually flex horizontally and vertically, allowing whatever object thrown or kicked with minor variation in trajectory. It also allows the athlete to move through the screen to receive or follow up the object passed through it. This unique technology and design has taken many years of research, design, planning and to ensure the TRS performs to the highest of standards.

The TRS is easy to assemble, is portable and can be used indoors and outdoors. The screen is adjustable and can be heightened or lowered depending on the drill or exercise being performed.

It is manufactured to the highest technical quality with features that are unique and exclusive to TRS.

The TRS is the only screen of its kind in the world.

The Journey

“Responding to what happens just in front of you in the game faster and quicker than the opposition means you are more likely to win the individual battle and then the game for the team.”
